Developing Community Involvement

Successful Parenting

There are so many things to learn and think about when caring for a child. Most communities offer a variety of services to help parents be successful in raising healthy, happy children. Talk to an older adult who has children. Ask the adult what help was available to them when they were a new parent. Then compare the adult's answers with the resources that are now available in your community.

Name _____

Unit 3

1. Compare and contrast the resources available when the adult was a new parent to the resources available in your community today. What has changed? What has stayed the same? What resources are no longer available? What new resources are available?

2. Discuss why you think resources for new parents have changed over the years. Do you think the changes are good? Explain your answer.
